FOREWORD

The following tables, arranged in three sections, cover operating toll ferries in the United States as of December 31, 1940. Various sources of information were utilized in the preparation of the tables and while the facts and figures are considered to be reasonably accurate their use does not constitute an endorsement by the Public Roads Administration.

Section 1 covers the location of the ferry, body of water crossed, highway route, road system, and toll rates. Section 2 covers the ferry terminals, number of boats usually operated, capacity of boats, overhead clearance, load limit, and operating schedules. Section 3 covers the ownership, name and address of owner, year services started, boats owned, reported cost, and traffic.

At the close of 1940 there were 561 toll ferries in operation. These are classified in the following manner with similar data for 1938 ^{1/}:

Ownership

Year	Number of ferries		Total
	Public	Private
1940	59	502	561
1938	62	606	668

		Interstate	International
1940	380	154	27	561
1938	463	179	26	668

^{1/} Final figures for 1938 include the following ferries not originally reported:

State	Name of ferry	State	Name of ferry

Calif.	San Pedro Transp. Co.	S.C.	South Island

In the two-year period 1939-40, fourteen new ferries started operations, 104 discontinued services, and 17, freed of tolls, continued in operation as free facilities. In addition, the ownership of 12 ferries changed from private to public and two from public to private.

Changes in Status of Toll Ferries During 1939 and 1940

Total	668	14	17	104	0	0	561

In 1941 two new ferries, privately owned, were reported in operation: Richardson, across the Mississippi River between Arkansas and Tennessee; and Rough River, across the Rough River in Kentucky. During this period 15 private ferries discontinued services and tolls were removed from two public ferries, both ferries continuing in operation as free facilities. At the Reese and Capertons ferries tolls were restored after the boats had been operated as free facilities since their purchase by Jackson County, Alabama nine months previously.

At the close of 1941 it is estimated there were 548 toll ferries in service, 59 of which were publicly owned.
