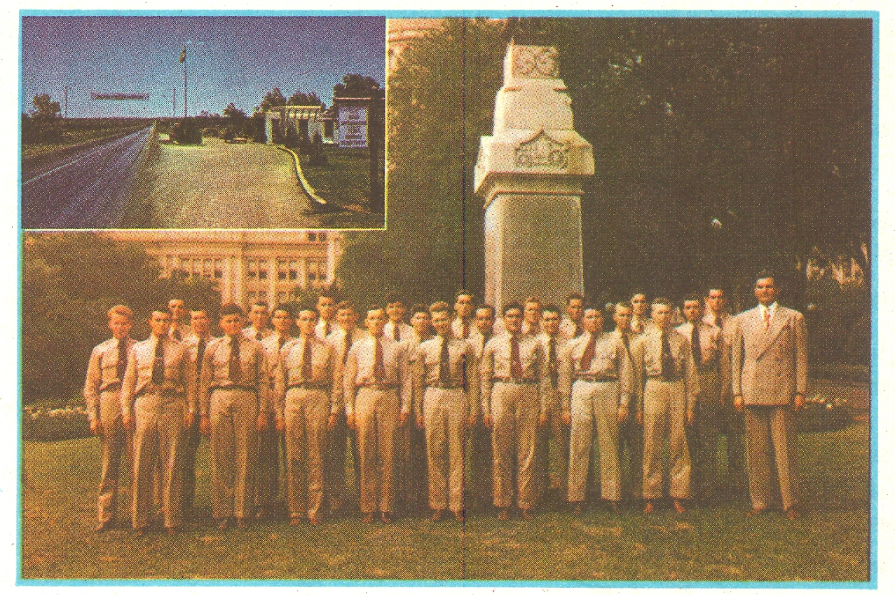
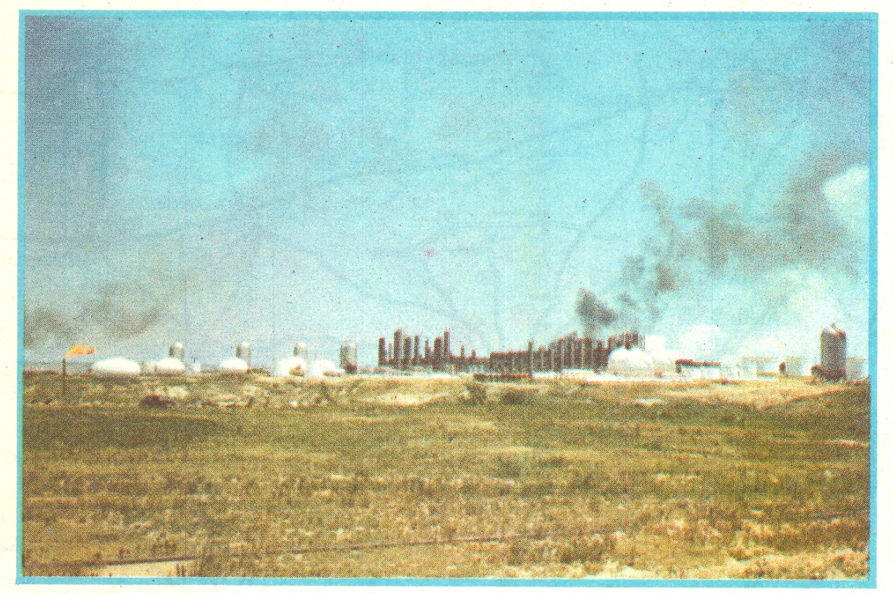
The rodeo is a Texas institution. Some of the finest performers — men and horses — can be seen in action.

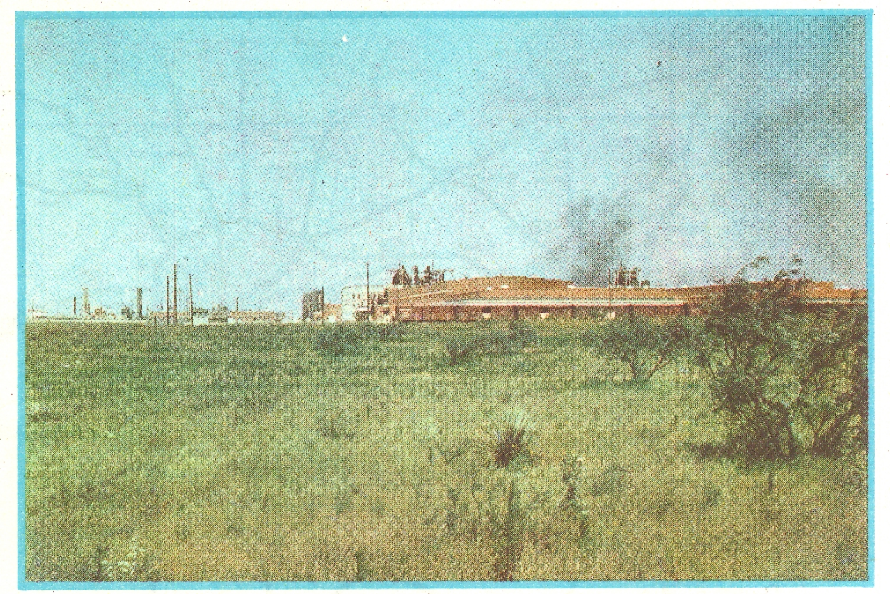


These young men operate the Texas Highway Department's nine Information Bureaus for the convenience of travelers. Typical bureau is shown in inset.

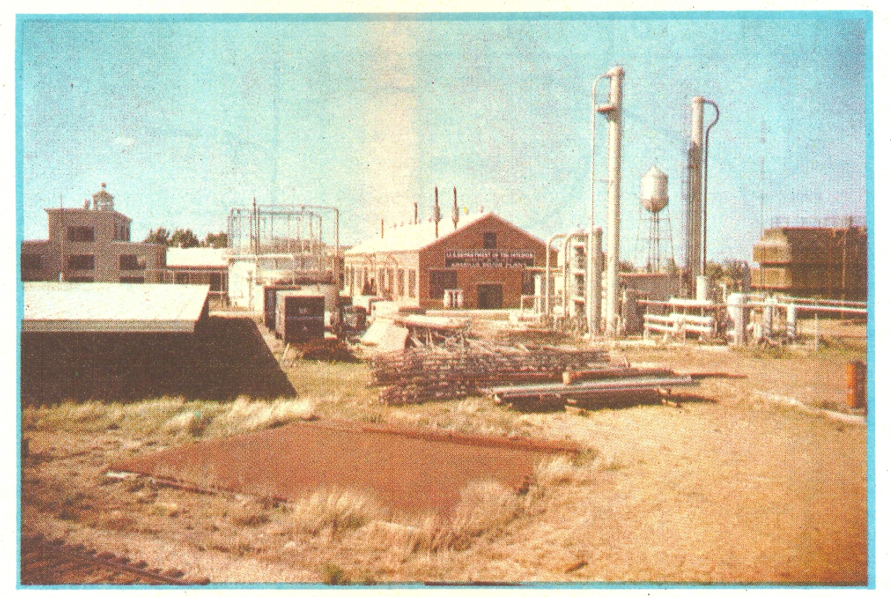
Texas parades its products and culture for the edification of thousands who visit the State Fair at Dallas every autumn.



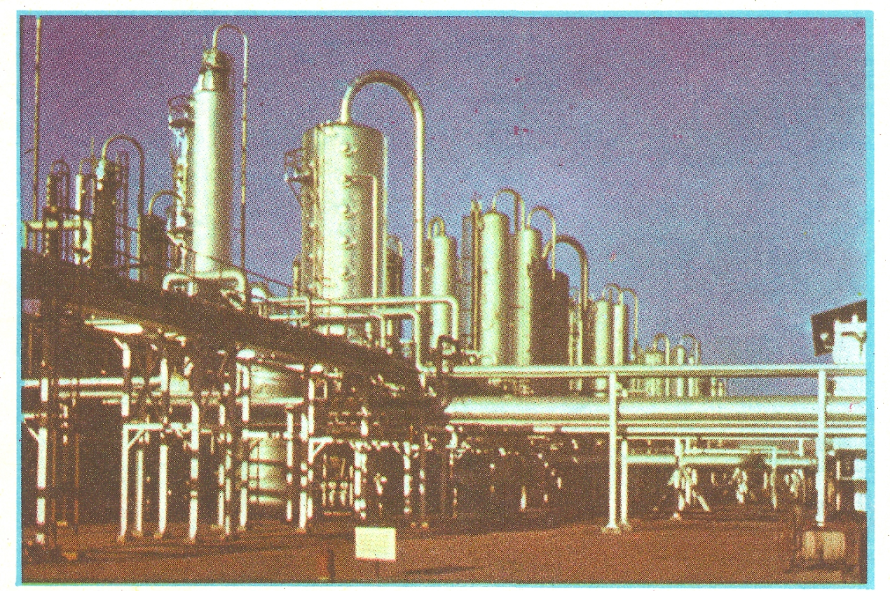
Oil refining is a major Texas industry. The Phillips plant near Borger is representative of more than 100 refineries operating throughout the Lone Star State.



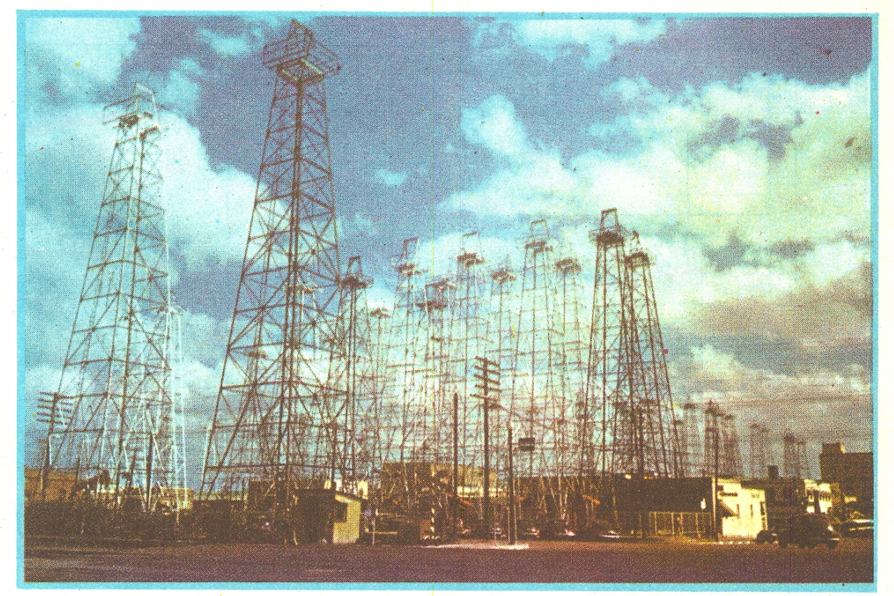
Vast reserves of natural gas have fostered diverse industries such as this synthetic rubber plant in the Texas Panhandle.



Helium, a rare but important gas in war and peace, is found in abundance near Amarillo where it is produced by the United States Government.



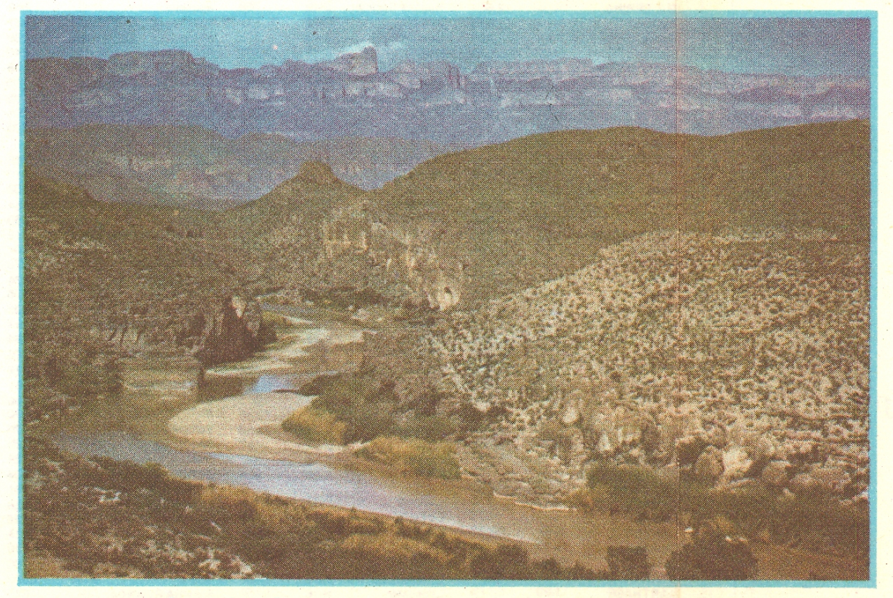
Development of the chemical industry in Texas has progressed by leaps and bounds in the last few years. This is a celanese plant.



Oil wells' spires are symbolic of Texas' greatest source of wealth. These towers dot the landscape in many parts of the state.

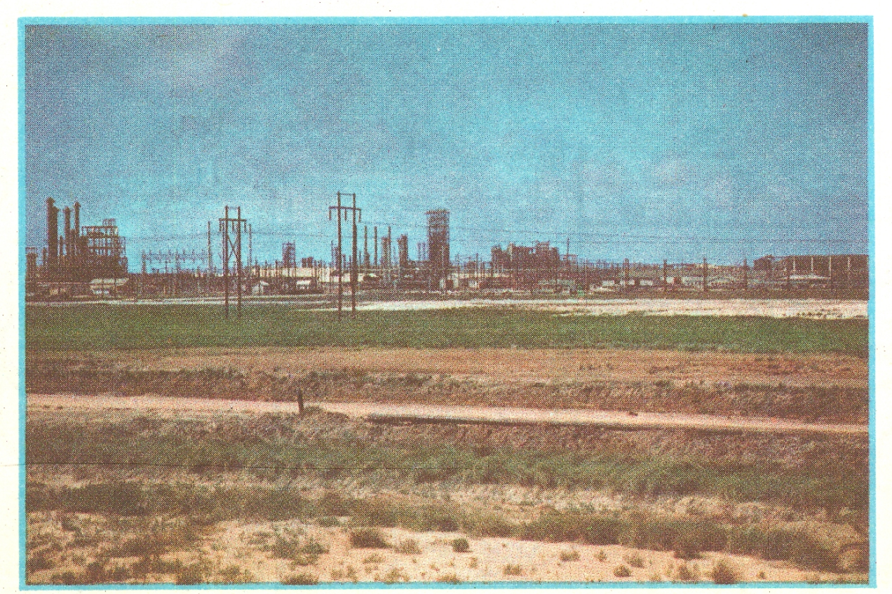
Giant machines prepare vast wheatfields for another planting following harvest of biggest wheat crop in Texas history. Average size of all Texas farms is 367 acres.

Thousands of visitors admire the Azalea Trails of East Texas annually. This is a scene of the Lacy Gardens, near Longview.

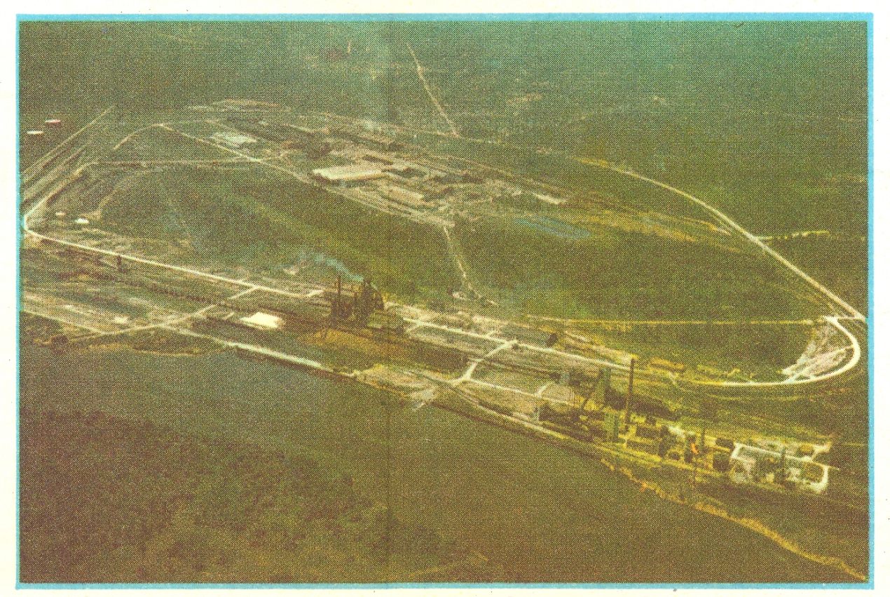


Scenery is breath-taking in the Big Bend National Park. This view is above the park's Hot Springs. Carmel Mountains in the background.

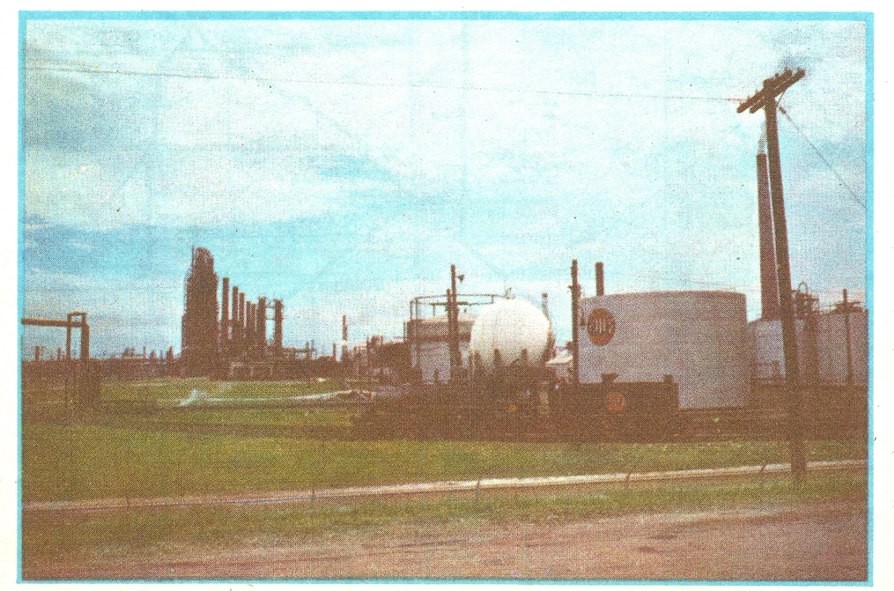
A Panhandle carbon black plant, one of forty-two in Texas which produce most of the nation's carbon black by recovering it from natural gas which would otherwise be wasted.



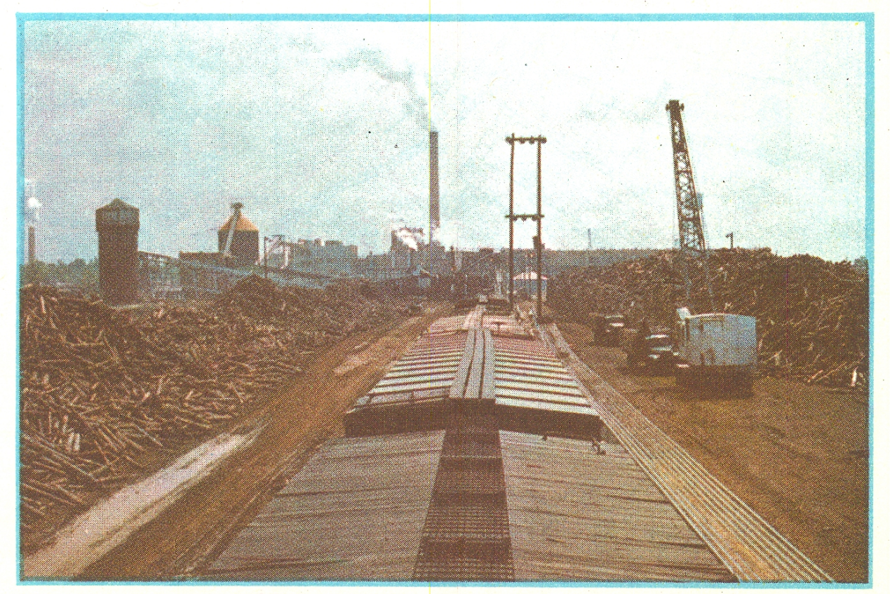
Ocean water is turned into magnesium and other products at the Dow Chemical Works near Freeport. Chemical production has become an important industry in Texas.



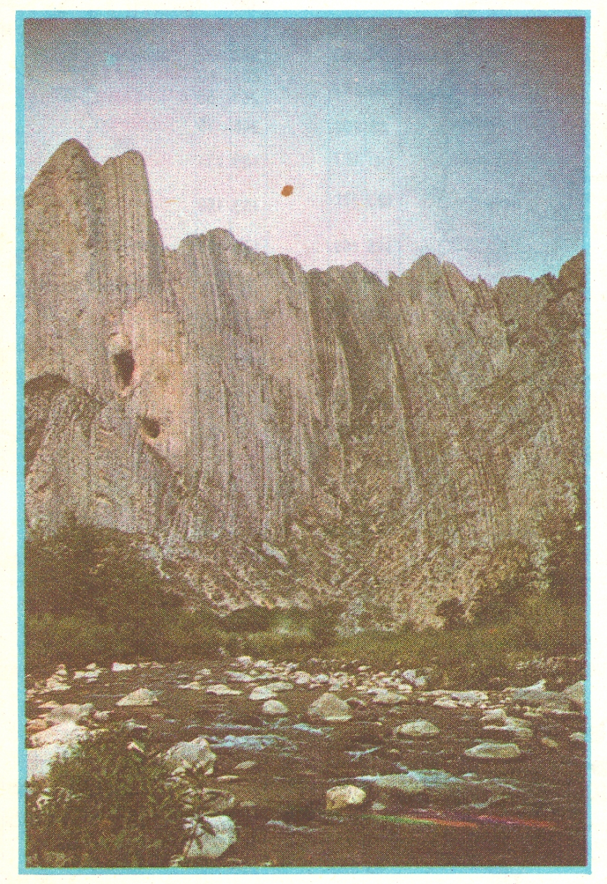
Steel is another of the many Texas industries. Above: Air view of the Sheffield Steel Plant at Houston.



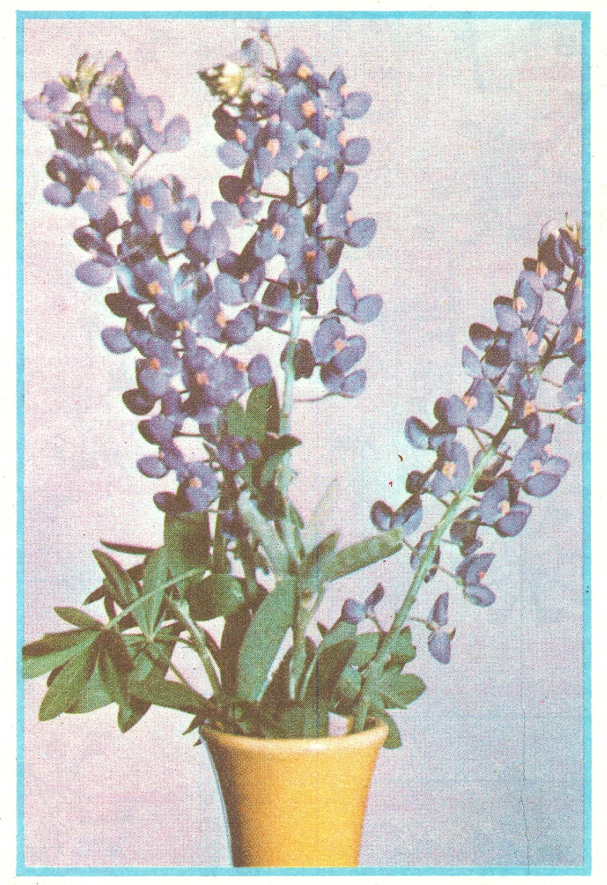
One of the wonders of Texas today is the rapid industrialization of the Gulf Coast. This is a portion of Gulf refining plant at Port Arthur.



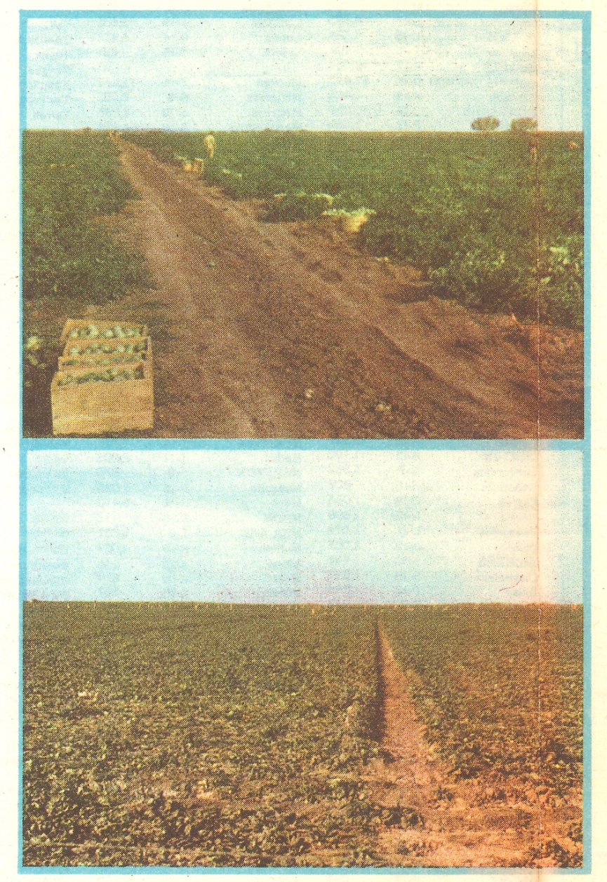
Your newspaper is likely printed on paper made from East Texas pine logs at this paper mill in Lufkin, the first plant of its kind in the South.



Huasteca Canyon in romantic Mexico, near Monterrey, a favorite tourist scene.



The Bluebonnet is the official flower of Texas. It grows profusely over the countryside.



Truck gardening is important in Texas' economy. Many vegetables are grown.

Sports fishermen catch tarpon, sailfish, and sharks in the Gulf of Mexico.

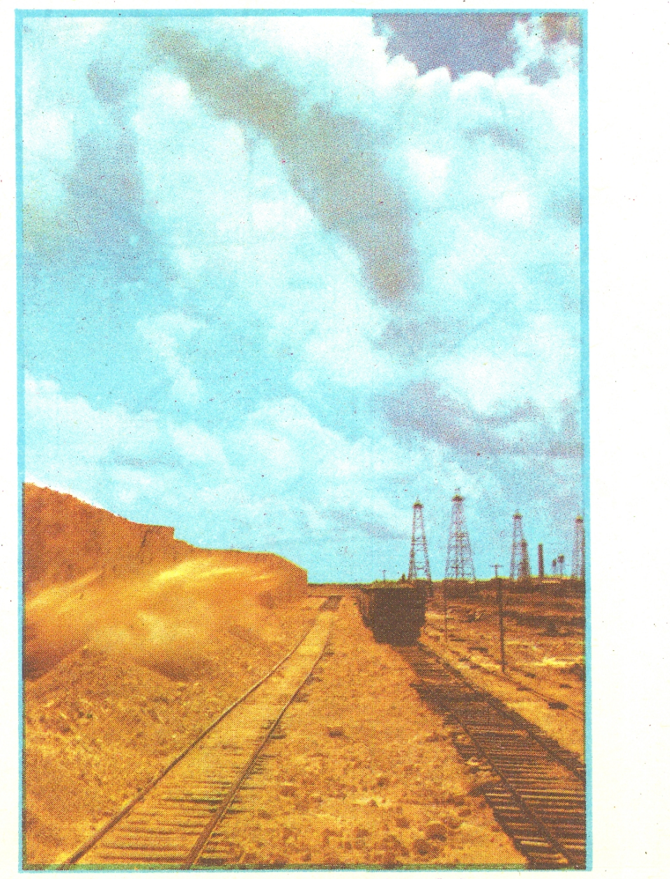
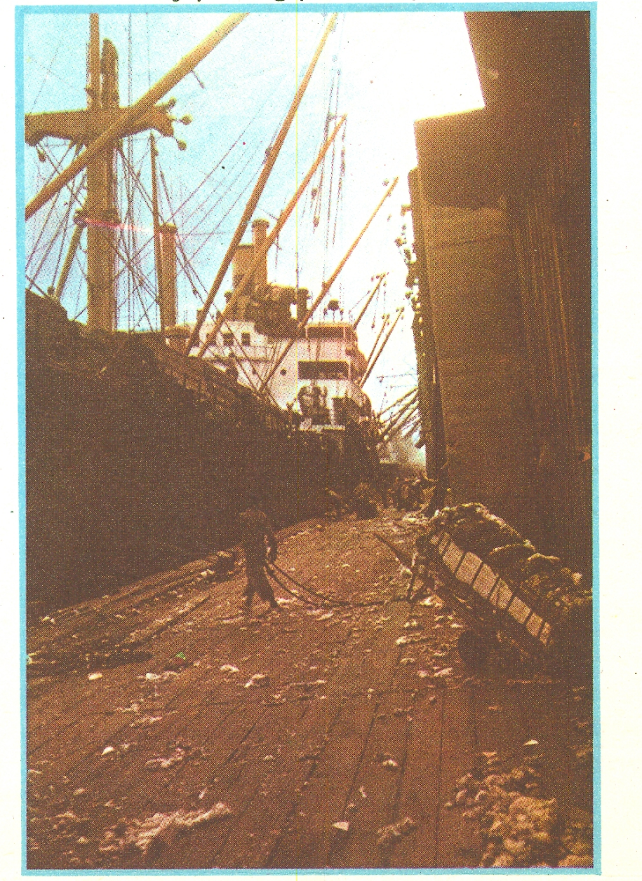
Oil and its products account for a major part of Texas industry. Shown here is a portion of Shell crude oil distillation unit near Houston.

To the stores of a nation go canned fruits and vegetables from Texas. One of the state's many packing plants is pictured above.



Eighty per cent of the nation's sulphur comes from Texas. Here the mineral is being blasted at the Freeport Sulphur Co. plant.



Texas commerce depends in large measure on the 13 deepwater ports on the Gulf Coast.
