The U.S. Department of Transportation's Urban Mass Transportation Administration (UMTA) today announced the release of a significantly improved version of the UMTA Transportation Planning System (UTPS) and a one-day introductory seminar on the new UTPS.

The system provides a transportation planner the ability to evaluate reasonably and economically some of the expected costs and benefits of a proposed transportation system. The newly available UTPS is a suite of 13 computer programs and documentation designed explicitly to aid in the long-range planning of urban multimodal transportation.

The one-day introductory seminar will be of interest to all management-oriented and semi-technical, as well as computer specialized transportation planners. It features an overview of the UTPS programs and how they can be used in transportation studies being conducted at the State and local level. The seminar will include a discussion of the software development program and its relationship to UMTA's technical studies program and a case study on the use of UTPS.

Locations for the seminars throughout the United States will be determined on a demand basis. Those interested in attending or sponsoring one of the sessions, please complete the attached form and return to the address noted. Dates and places will be announced at a later date.

There will be no charge for the course, but attendees will be responsible for their own travel, lodging and other personal expenses while attending the session.

For further information contact the UMTA Office of Public Affairs at (202) 426-4043.

I am interested in attending the one-day UTPS Introductory Seminar
