Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe today announced the release of the second annual Summary of National Transportation Statistics.

The report, part of the Department's program to improve availability of transportation statistics to industry and government, is a summary statistical profile of all modes of transportation in the United States. The Department feels that through improving and expanding the availability of information about transportation, decision-making in the public and private sectors can be enhanced.

Inventory, cost and system performance data for all modes of travel are included in the summary. Supplementary data has been added this year relating transportation to the overall economy, energy consumption and the environment.

The report is available from the Department of Transportation, Office of Systems Analysis and Information, 400 Seventh Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20590. Phone: (202) 426-4150.
