DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION HEADQUARTERS BUILDINGS

No. 142

September 15, 1975

SOUTHWEST SEVENTH was originated in 1969 to inform all Washington headquarters employees of the newly formed Department of Transportation about the progress of the new headquarters building, the physical consolidation of the departmental elements, and the services available to them. Activities covered in this publication were those which we thought would be of interest to the majority of DOT employees--regardless of the DOT element in which they worked--and those which we felt would not be covered in the individual administration newsletters.

The period of consolidation, adjustment, and extensive change has been weathered. The communications gap once filled by SOUTHWEST SEVENTH has diminished to hairline proportions. It has been determined, therefore, to discontinue its publication on a regular basis. The new DOT NEWS and the administration newsletters will keep you well informed. We hope we have been of some service to you throughout the past several years and should any event occur that is of special importance to DOT Washington Headquarters employees, we will issue a SOUTHWEST SEVENTH on a special-edition basis.
